Emily Weitz, Outreach Coordinator for On Our Sleeves will share with us about the program. On Our Sleeves at Dayton Children's is leading the movement for children's mental wellness, to build a world where discussions about mental wellness is part of the upbringing of every child. Our goal is to give expert-created resources to our local community so all adults can understand and promote mental wellness to all children in our community. On Our Sleeves is aimed at empowering adults, whether they are parents, caregivers, mentors, teachers, or family members, with the tools to start conversations with the children in their lives about mental health. Kids don't wear their thoughts on their sleeves, they need help and support from caring adults in their lives to help them learn and expand their feelings vocabulary to be emotionally resilient. Join the On Our Sleeves movement today to receive free monthly emails, interactive resources and guides to address children's mental wellness today!
