Caroline Rush and James Hanson from the Washington County Long-Term Recovery Group

Caroline Rush and James Hanson are project managers well-versed in construction. They bring to the table decades of experience at all levels. Their management experience and leadership are helping Washington County recover faster and leaner than otherwise would be possible. The main focus of the Washington County Long Term Recovery Group is to eliminate duplicate efforts and streamline the process so that all resources are used efficiently. At the same time, they will effectively screen all requests for help so that resources are given to those who have a legitimate need. In addition, the Long Term Recovery Group will serve as a gateway to volunteers who would like to contribute to the recovery effort. This will safeguard residents and ensure that all organizations are cooperating together. You can keep up with the activities of the group or volunteer your time by visiting our Washington County Long Term Recovery FaceBook page.
