RCOR 7-Day Forecast

A mostly cloudy and showery Monday will give way to a pleasant spring week in Central NC. Today, a round of showers will cross the region in the afternoon, followed by a line of thunderstorms this evening. At this point, the thunderstorms that develop look to be sub-severe but, as always, keep an eye on the weather and head indoors if you hear thunder! The rest of the week will feature mostly sunny skies, high temperatures in the upper 60's to low 70's, and low temperatures in the upper 30's to mid 40's. There will be another chance of light rain overnight Tuesday as an upper-level disturbance moves across the region. We are still not out of the woods in regard to below-freezing temperatures. If you're in the process of planting a garden, make sure to keep an eye out for overnight temps that could drop below freezing. The long-range forecast shows a few days next week with the potential for chilly overnight temperatures.
